

1. Creator Bob Gorrell

Title "The Donkey Club Presents Ferraro the Blonde Bombshell"

Publication Richmond News Leader

Publication Date 1984

Summary/ Description of cartoon In 1984, U.S. Representative Geraldine Ferraro was chosen to be the Presidential election running mate of Walter Mondale, a former U.S. Vice President. Ferraro became the first woman to run for vice president as a major party candidate in the history of the United States. While her professional credentials withstood scrutiny, her candidacy foundered when her husband refused to release his financial records, thus provoking questions about the couple's integrity.

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 1984"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

2. Creator Jim Larrick

Title "#!! Reagan!!"

Publication The Columbus Dispatch

Publication Date 1984

Summary/ Description of cartoon In 1984, U.S. Representative Geraldine Ferraro was chosen to be the Presidential election running mate of Walter Mondale, a former U.S. Vice President. Ferraro became the first woman to run for vice president as a major party candidate in the history of the United States. While her professional credentials withstood scrutiny, her candidacy foundered when her husband refused to release his financial records, thus provoking questions about the couple's integrity.

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 1984"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

3. Creator Bob Lawlor

Title "Whew... That Last Attack Was Close!"

Publication The Philadelphia Daily News

Publication Date 1984

Summary/ Description of cartoo: In 1984, U.S. Representative Geraldine Ferraro was chosen to be the Presidential election running mate of Walter Mondale, a former U.S. Vice President. Ferraro became the first woman to run for vice president as a major party candidate in the history of the United States. While her professional credentials withstood scrutiny, her candidacy foundered when her husband refused to release his financial records, thus provoking questions about the couple's integrity.

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 1984"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

4. Creator Bruce MacKinnon

Title "Mis-Information"

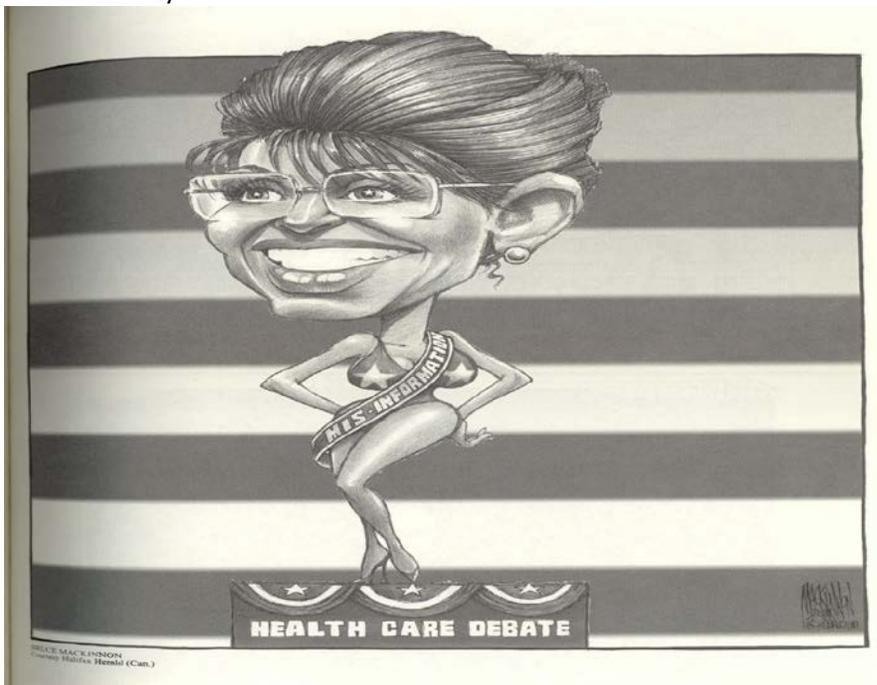

Publication Halifax Herald (Canada)

Publication Date 2009

Summary/ Description of cartoon: In 2008 Sarah Palin, the Governor of Alaska, was chosen to be the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate by Senator John McCain. Palin was often criticized because she frequently and continuously misspoke certain facts.

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 2009"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

5. Creator Ed Hall

Title "Too Messy"

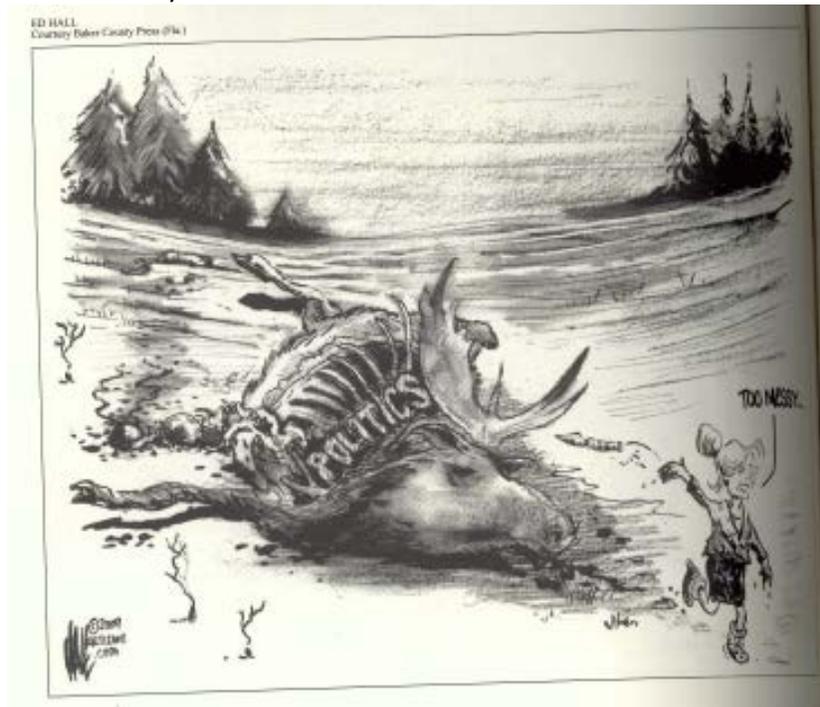

Publication Baker County Press (Florida)

Publication Date 2009

Summary/ Description of cartoon. In 2008 Sarah Palin, the Governor of Alaska, was chosen to be the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate by Senator John McCain. During her vice-presidential campaign, Palin became known as the only candidate who could "field dress" a moose, and she capitalized on that knowledge to energize many voters. However, after her failed bid, she returned to Alaska and soon decided to abandon her elected post in favor of pursuing media opportunities, including a commentator's role on Fox News and a reality TV show titled "Sarah Palin's Alaska."

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 2009"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

6. Creator Chuck Legge

Title "I'm Stepping Down"

Publication The Frontiersman

Publication Date 2009

Summary/ Description of cartoon. In 2008 Sarah Palin, the Governor of Alaska, was chosen to be the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate by Senator John McCain. After her failed bid she decided to abandon her governorship in Alaska before her term expired to run for vice president. Often, Palin was criticized for this, as if leaving office would launch her into obscurity, and for being unintelligent and ill-suited for governance- so much that she can't see that she is ensuring her own demise. However, Plain travelled the country in 2011, capturing media attention without committing to a president bid.

Source "The Best Editorial Cartoons 1984"

Folder: Sekicky Female Vice-Presidents

CHUCK LEGGE
Courtesy The Frontiersman

